2 to our front door; I was studying to find out the cause of his exce[ptional] good humor - when accidently stood my friend, Mr. Eliarson (Father of James) come in, and I soon discovered by the congratulations of his friends that there was some thing extraordinary on foot: that you, said they mild and feeling man, that you, then added with a melancholy smile - I never rejoice in the death of any person, even though I benefit by that death; Potatoes forbid my making any inquiries, so I waited patiently and soon learnt that Mr. Eliarson had come to town for the purpose of taking possession of a large fortune, left him by the recent death of a distant relation - I now thought I had discovered the cause of our young friends extreme good humor, neighbor Price the son in law to Eliarson, of course this rich though singular old gentleman was equally related to both and I expected to learn that both were equally benefited that I was soon undeceived, by being told that this solitary had a violent antipathy to women, and could not think of doing

3 Then a favor even at his death - Well said our charitable Friend with a sneer, and stroking back his wig (for hair you know he has not) Spoon Mitchell is left without a shilling and I am as much obligated as if I had received the whole myself - ^{generous noble minded young man - thought I} his excellent ^{friend's} friend, his worthy Mother chid him, and I remained silent but not inattentive - Who Spoon Mitchell is, I have yet to learn - but I strongly suspect it is some Amiable young man, who has provoked the ill will of this tart plume, by a sweetness of disposition which never has been, nor never will be his - something was then said about thy departure; and the effect it would have on a courier of mine - I replied that he would certainly, as all the rest of us did, feel it a considerable loss - and nothing more, do you think, said Emily, nothing more I believe ~~she~~ said I, and then I endeavored to convince them that I thought it quite possible for a delicate young Lady to treat a Gentleman with ~~perfect~~ respect without having any other motive

Mr Stewart began humming a tune, and I very soon discovered by the carelessness of his manners, that he felt in no small degree, the effects of our Grand Anniversary which was held yesterday. it being, the fourth of July; by the way, it was sorry you were not here - the day was celebrated with a great deal of pomp - the music was fine, and the parade very grand you know it is my maxim not to follow the soldiers yet when they pass by our door, I cannot withstand the temptation of going at least to a window, the court door was very elegantly done up, and very handsomely ornamented for the speakers and an Oration was delivered at 4 o'clock in the morning, but to my subject, in reply to something miss Ashton said miss Crider affectingly answered no Child: Child retorted, Mr Johnson (for such I found was his name) and pointing whimsically towards ^{miss Ashton} do you call this a Child. I was awaked last night

Dear Kitty

I have only time with a very bad pen to write you a few lines, We are all well and all your friends the same & believe, I send a draft by Mr Weatherly which I wish you to have colour black you can send it back by Mr Harding who goes down in a few short times let me know by Mr W what the price is and I will get Mr Harding to settle it. You can say by Mr W if you want the rest of your money and I can let Mr Henderson know it if he does not send it by Mr Weatherly the draft is not mine but Anna Moore Ebersoles I have never heard from your brother or sisters since you left here but perhaps he has written to you give my love to Mr Wooddy Mr Waters Mary Martin and believe me yours affectionately

Dear Catharine

William leaves us tomorrow for West Point and expects to go through Bal timore as I informed you in the few lines I wrote you last week. I send you by him £100 which Mr Henderson has advanced for you Mr. Rush not being able at this time to raise sufficient for our wants You must be careful to lay this hundred dol lars out to advantage as it is nearly all you have. Mrs Drich talks I am told very much about setting up largely in the millenary and Mrs Thomas still says she will carry it on I called on Mrs J last night and proposed her taking you into a kind of partnership with her but I do not think she seems much dispo sed to do so however she said she would consider upon my proposition. Mrs J says she makes no doubt of your doing well here if you will manage prudently. White satten can be had here (of the best quality) by the yard at 1.37 1/2 cents if you can get it upon better terms there you had better get some and ribbons can be had in Baltimore by the piece quite low you had perhaps better get several pieces but this place is quite over run with artificial flowers light and cheap matters for turbands you will find profitable. Mr. Joys pasteboards wine and milk can be had much lower in Baltimore than in this place and would advise you to buy in a good stock of them ladies gloves you could sell well provided you can lay them into a advantage. Your brother John was here yesterday evening on his way to Worrenton and says if you had rather return by Shephardstown that if you will write him word what you wish him to meet you in Boonsborough he will take you be there for you and then bring you on to Leesburg. but if you had rather come direct by here and will write me exact by the day you will be in the Dock town I will have a conveyance the ready for you to come home in you can come rectly to my house and take your time in making my choice of a situation. to carry on your business my house you can always consider as a home at least so long as it pleases God to allow me one My sister Dixon with her family arrived here the 2^d of this and did not leave until the 17th of May Mrs Bennett came several days before the convention and staid some time Mrs Tho^s Moore has three children sisters and two cousins came the day before the convention and only left us yesterday. I have been very much hurry'd to find William for it is impossible to do much work when you have a house of troublesome company and but few servants. It will stay only a few hours in Baltimore I regret his coming to leave it so soon as it was my wish he should call on many of my friends but he has no time to spare as it is highly necessary he should get to the Point early in June as he is to sell Mary Martin a letter from her would be one of the most acceptable things I could receive give my love to her Mr Wooddy and all friends and believe me
