In 1979 the Illinois Department of Conservation participated in a project involving the removal of inappropriate synthetic siding. The project was partially funded by a federal historic preservation grant-in-aid administered by the department. The siding, which had been in place between twenty and twenty-five years, was faded, dented, and peeling. Moreover, it had destroyed the architectural integrity of the house. Wide siding covered narrow clapboards and decorative details, and trim had been removed when the siding was installed. Beneath the siding, the wood structures had deteriorated. And it was clear that a regular painting schedule would have been far preferable to synthetic siding.

The project was in Peoria's West Bluff Historic District. Installed in 1955, the aluminum siding on this 1889 frame house had been painted white to cover its original coating, which had faded and peeled. Eight-inch-wide aluminum siding had been applied over four-inch clapboards, altering the scale and proportions of the building, and decorative details had been covered or removed during installation.

Faced with periodically painting the aluminum siding and maintaining a building out of character with the rest of the neighborhood, the owner removed the siding himself, disclosing the badly deteriorated clapboards beneath. The aluminum shell was not airtight, yet there was not enough air circulation to allow moisture to evaporate. Dirt had accumulated behind the siding, and the condensed moisture that had been trapped between clapboards and siding ran down the side of the house, leaving patterns in the accumulated dirt. Most bottom boards near raised moldings or trim boards, where moisture had collected at the base of each planar surface, were rotten and required replacing. In other areas water was actually entering and being trapped behind the siding, a phenomenon attributable to any of several causes—improper installation, failure

Synthetic Siding: An Illinois Example

Above: Covered with aluminum siding, this 1889 house in Peoria's West Bluff Historic District lacked detail and had a flat, monotone appearance.

Below: The same house during a preservation project partially funded by a federal historic preservation grant-in-aid administered by the Department of Conservation. The synthetic siding is being removed, rotten or missing boards are being replaced, and the surface is being painted.

TO: Alabama Municipalities

FROM: Alabama Historical Commission

Re: A suggested ordinance for the creation of a Historic Preservation Commission.

The following draft model preservation ordinance is provided as an aid to initial efforts by local governments to compose a historic preservation ordinance. An additional source recommended for municipalities interested in pursuing a local preservation ordinance is Recommended Model Provisions for a Preservation Ordinance, with Annotations prepared by Stephen Dennis of the National Trust for Historic Preservation and can be obtained from the Trust's Regional Office at the William Aiken House, 456 King Street, Charleston, South Carolina 29403, (803-724-4712).

The purpose of this model ordinance is to provide a suggested legal framework that will allow local governments to participate in the National Park Service/Alabama Historical Commission Certified Local Government program as provided for in the state's enabling legislation to establish local historic preservation commissions, architectural review boards and local preservation ordinances.

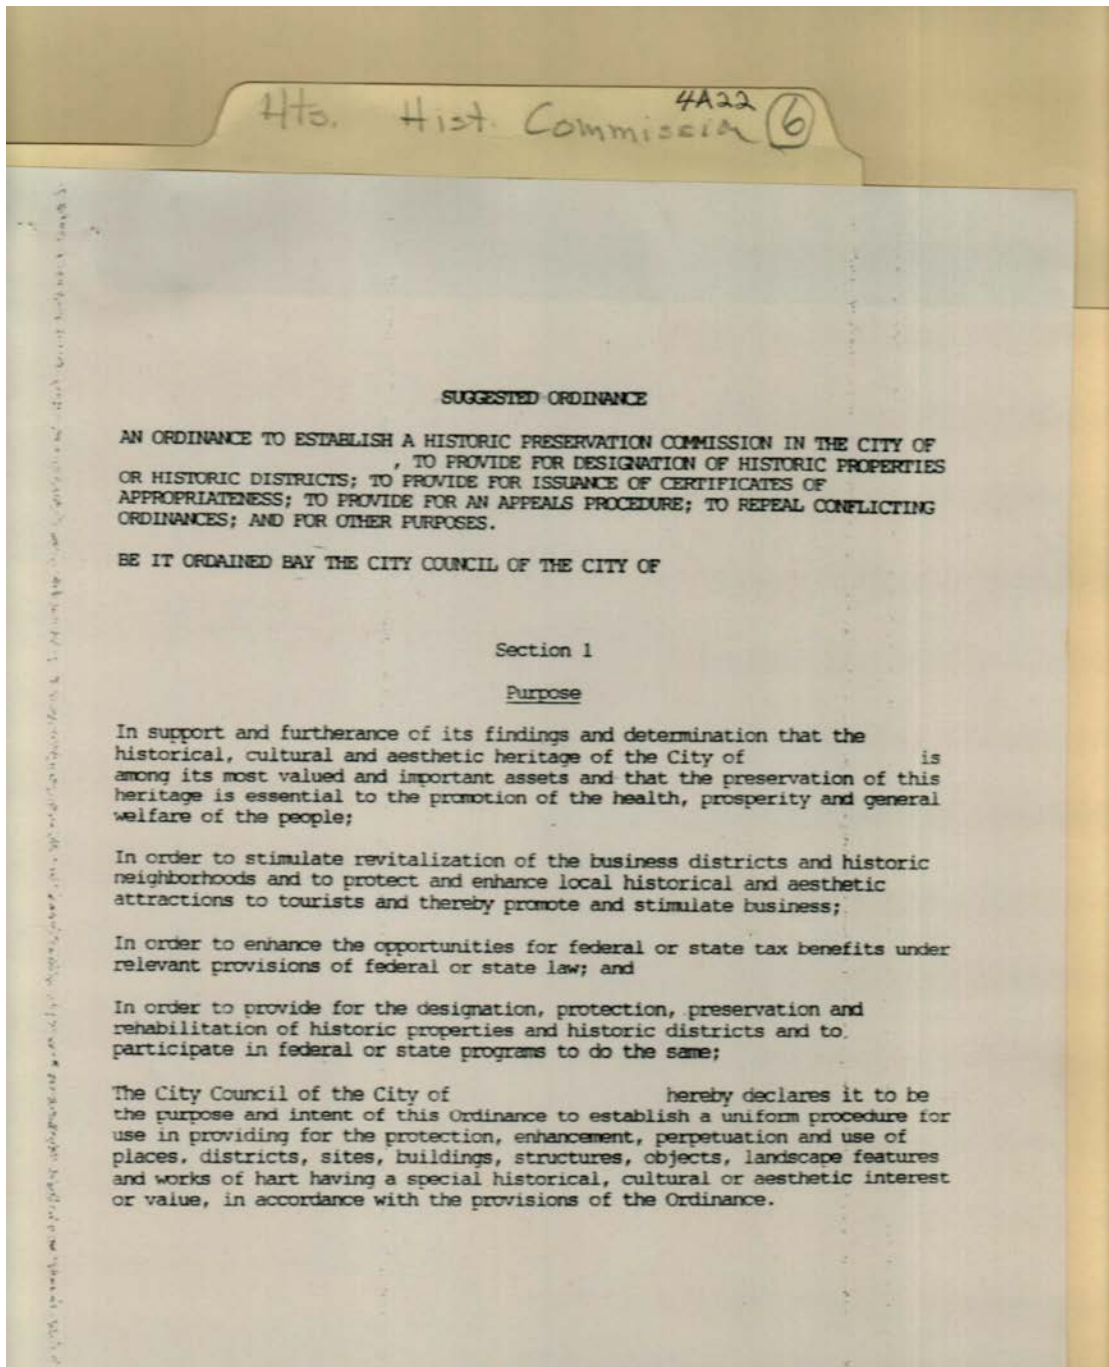

While the Alabama Historical Commission is available to provide technical assistance to aid local preservation efforts, the actual form of any ordinance is the responsibility of the local government and its legal counsel.
