under the superintendence and control of the Mayor and Aldermen of Huntsville whose duty it shall be to employ a suitable teacher, at a fixed and reasonable salary per annum, and to examine said school and see that the teacher properly and faithfully performs his duties as such."

A tax of six and a half cents on every hundred dollars worth of property for the support of the school in addition to the income from the sixteenth section funds and the Masonic Hall fund was laid. A committee had been charged with the investigation of some who represented themselves as trustees of the sixteenth section fund. Another was appointed to receive subscriptions and donations. This order was given: "That a committee be appointed to memorialize the Legislature to amend the Charter of the Corporation in regard to Primary or Free Schools, which being put to the board was LOST." If this means that an earlier effort had received an unfavorable vote, such an interpretation seems to be verified by the minutes of 25 July 1809, when the appointment of a committee on the subject of a primary school was ordered. Uncertainty about available funds, linked with their questioning the legality of the election of some sixteenth section trustees, was cause for concern.

The act of 1823 had made explicit reference to collecting tuition fees; their own act was also specific on the subject of subscriptions and donations. Therefore, any school they might set up would be partly public and partly private. The words of General W. F. Perry, first state superintendent, furnish a criterion for making the difference: "As a further means of improving the character of the common school instruction, it is the policy

Overall student enrollment was stable in 1911, 1912 and 1913 with a dramatic 19% increase in 1914. High School enrollment for white students was up 58% from 1911 to 1915 and 20% in the black high school. The public high schools gained in students and prestige during this five year period, with the most significant change occurring in white high school enrollment.

Enrollment peaked in 1945-46 which was the high point of government employment at the Arsenal. As that facility was cut back, Huntsville school enrollment decreased.¹³³

The survey staff conducted on-the-site inspections of each of Huntsville's schools and found the most consistent problem to be inadequate land to provide for playgrounds and needed classroom expansion. The evaluation of the condition of each of the seven schools by the survey staff in 1948 was as follows:

the enthusiastic audience participation.

1928 promised to be a prosperous year the Lincoln Mills were expanding their facilities. On the drawing board were plans for a modern hotel to be called the Russell Erskine. An April 4th article noted that "... local business was expanding fast." On May 13, 1928 Huntsville's "first skyscraper" the twelve story Huntsville Daily Times building neared completion.

At commencement on May 18, 1928 forty-three students received High School diplomas and 2 diplomas and fifteen commercial certificates were awarded. Miss Vanover was the commercial teacher.

Many exciting events were taking place outside of Huntsville, this was the time of air flights across the Atlantic and also polar expeditions. It was also the time of the Zeppelin, the lighter than air machine. China and Japan were at war and many Europeans were caught in the seige at Peking. (7-16-28 Kellogg-Briand Treaty outlaws war.) Closer to home, a bridge across the Tennessee river at whitesburg was to start in the new year. Herbert Hoover was chosen a candidate for the Republican party and Alfred Smith for the democrats with (vote evenly divided) prohibition and farm relief important issues. Floods in the spring and fall were common in Alabana and road damage was an inevitable result.

An editorial on overcrowded schools in June 6, 1928 proposed the purchase of the Huntsville college grounds for a Junior High School [(?) was this eventually done?] Every summer exams and institutes were held to certify teachers and to upgrade certificates. These were well attended and a law concerning teacher liscenses was passed in July, 1928.

Strong sentiment is expressed by the Music Study Club for a band at the High School. S. R. Butler, D. C. Monroe, and W. G. Hamm support the project. A fund drive is started.
