school is 605 East Clinton Street.

Although mainly used as a grade school, accomodating grades one through six, in 1948 it housed a seventh grade due to overcrowding of the city system. Starting in 1975, the sixth grade students began attending a middle school under the newly instigated middle school concept plan.

West Clinton Elementary School was built orginally in 1916 to be the system's senior high school. When the high school on Randolph Street was completed in 1927, this building became an elementary school with Miss Jessie Hopper as principal. It was closed in 1962 and became the temporary home of the Civic Arts Council. The building was demolished in 1974 to provide space for a parking garage for the Von Braun Civic Center.

Fifth Avenue School, (located on Fifth Avenue, now called Governors Drive) was built in 1944. The school was closed in August, 1974, and sold to the University of Alabama in Huntsville Medical School. It is now, after renovation, the Ambulatory Care Center.

William Hooper Councill High School came into existence in 1915, the year Minnie Scruggs graduated and received the first twelfth grade diploma. The school was named for William Hooper Councill, who was born of slave parents in Fayette, North Carolina. (Mr. Councill, as a youth, was sold into Alabama and eventually became President of Alabama A&M University.) The first building was completed in 1892 on a tract of land known as Davis Grove. It was located near the Masonic Hall of Evening Star Lodge, Number 6, situated on Barnett Street. The old frame building was replaced by a brick one during C.E. Powell's administration, from 1922 to 1930. In 1952 a new addition was dedicated. The senior high school department was officially closed August 2, 1966. For two years, September, 1966-May, 1968, William Hooper Councill School retained grades one through nine. From 1969 until 1971, Councill was an elementary school for grades one through six. In 1971, William Hooper Councill School

Schools

West Huntsville schoolmen associated with Three Mills.
Originally the children were taught in a dwelling house at 6th St + 13th Ave, donated by the Mills.
In 1917 an eight room wooden building was built on 9th Street and 13th Ave. (3001 9th Ave SW) the site of the present school.
Money was donated by the Mills, the local citizens and Misses Virginia McCormick and Grace Walker.
William P. Fanning was the first principal in the primitive buildings. Trees that were planted by him are still growing at the site.
West Huntsville became an accredited high school in the early forties and remained such until it became a consolidated high school known as S. R. Butler High School.
