Fruit Department—Plums

subacid. Clingstone. A fine market sort, in large demand because early and a good shipper. About June 15.

Satsuma (Blood Plum). Large; dark purplish red, spotted with bluish bloom; flesh blood-red, firm, juicy, excellent quality. Fine for canning. Matures middle of July.

Wickson. Large to very large; obconical; deep maroon-red, covered with white bloom; flesh of fine texture, firm, sugary, delicious. Very valuable as a keeper and shipper. Last of July.

Willard. Very early. Medium size; dark clear red, minutely dotted with yellow; flesh rather firm, yellow, sweet and of fair quality; freestone. Ripens before Red June, and a most satisfactory Plum to grow.

Prunus Simoni (Apricot Plum). Large, flat, tomato-shaped; a beautiful, rich red; flesh yellow, firm and very juicy, with a peculiar aromatic flavor, pleasing and refreshing to many. A distinct species from China, and altogether is an acquisition which will prove valuable. A very "shy" bearer.

IMPROVED CHICKASAW PLUMS

Plums of this type are best ripened, and their best qualities are brought out by ripening, in the house. Pick as they commence coloring. The trio we offer below are considered the finest of the type, so well adapted to each other that, planted together, they bring out all that is best in each.

Milton. From seed of the Wild Goose. Large, somewhat oblong; an attractive dark red skin; flesh firm, quality good; clingstone. Productive and an excellent market sort. End of June.

Sophie. Large, slightly pear-shaped; deep, rich red; flesh juicy, tender, good; semi-clingstone. Very productive when pollinated properly. Early July.

Wild Goose. Medium to large; skin bright vermillion, covered with blue bloom, richly acid; flesh juicy and sweet; quality good; clingstone. One of the oldest of the native American Plums. End of June.

EUROPEAN PLUMS

Experience proves this type of Plum especially well adapted to the Northern states, but rarely a success in the South—the long, hot summer is against them. Not successful in this section (Huntsville). Some people call for them, and so we list a few varieties which we know will give fair satisfaction in some sections, and in favorable seasons will amply repay planting.

Bradshaw. Large; reddish purple, white bloom. July.

Lombard. Medium; a peculiar violet-red; flesh yellow, juicy, pleasant. Late July.

Shropshire Damson. Larger than the old Blue Damson; dark purple; good quality. While European Plums do not do well in the South, this variety will prove good. August.

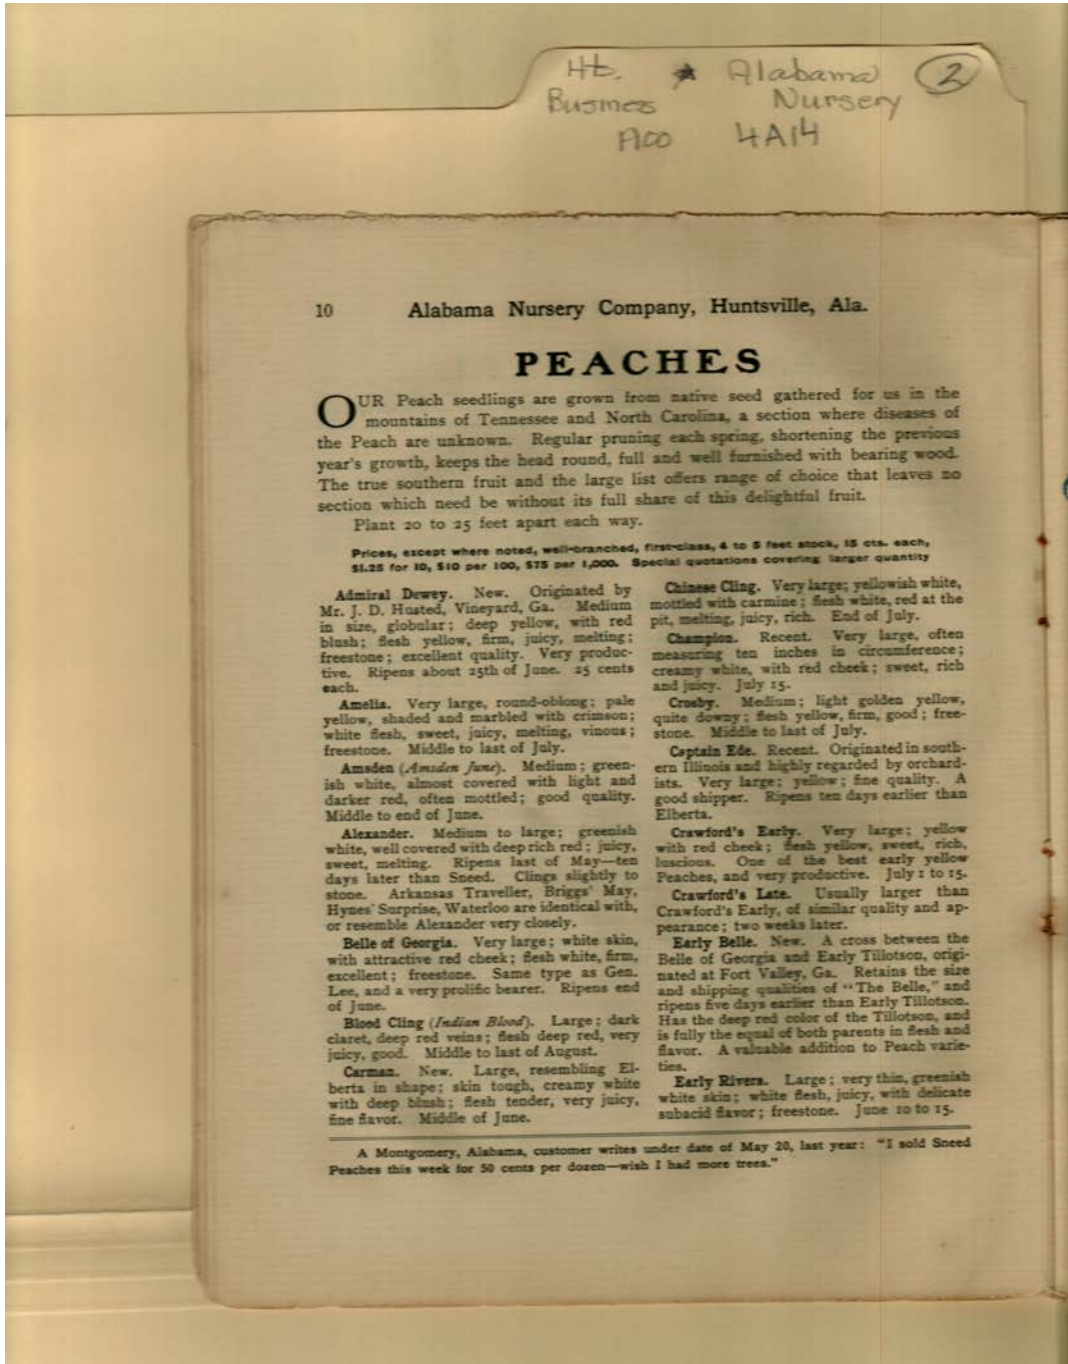

Wickson blooms too early to plant for a "sure thing;" late spring frosts almost always damage, if not utterly cut it off. In quality it is the finest of them all, we think.

We PREPAY Express or Freight Charges on all orders of $5 or more.
