Old Depot Museum A Link With The Past

ONCE A DEPOT, NOW A HISTORY LESSON

The last passenger train to arrive at the depot was the Pullman Car Company's Pullman Car, which arrived in 1981. The depot was built in 1901 and is one of the oldest in the city.

In 1981, the depot was purchased by the City of Selma and is now being renovated. The depot is a fine example of early 20th-century architecture and is a link to the city's past.

Bank A Selma Fixture For 85 Years
It's Actually Two Banks In One

First Alabama Bank in Selma has been an active part of the city's financial life since 1889. The bank is a fixture in the city's history and is a link to the city's past.

Tuscaloosa's bankers have always been committed to customer service.

Tuscaloosa's First Alabama Shared Hard Times With City

The city's first Alabama bank, the Bank of Selma, has shared the city's hard times. The bank is a link to the city's past and is a reminder of the city's role in the railroad industry.

Pullman Plant Another Bessemer Link To Railroads

The Pullman Plant in Bessemer is another link to the city's railroad history. The plant is a fine example of early 20th-century industrial architecture and is a link to the city's past.

TORPEDOES AHEAD!

Explosives Serve As Warning

In early days, when a train had to make an emergency stop on the tracks for repairs, it was a warning of trouble ahead.

When an engine had to stop unexpectedly, the train conductor would call the depot and the depot would send a train to the scene. This was a warning of trouble ahead.

The depot also carried a large stock of torpedoes and other explosives. These were used in the event of an emergency stop.
