City and County Welcome You

The opening of the dedication of our Monte Sano Park Development on Thursday, August 25, marks one of the bright spots in our community's advancement.

Its significance is so pronounced that I cannot help but feel you should be invited to share in its celebration.

In this manner, you will have the privilege of inspecting its wonderful advantages with respect to its present and future development, and I can assure you the citizens of Huntsville and Madison County will be delighted to add in your every enjoyment while here.

You will see, from the program that has been arranged, that each and every suburb is designed for your complete pleasure, as it is my happy privilege, as Mayor of the City of Huntsville, to extend to you a very cordial welcome and invitation to spend that day with us, and all of the rest of your days for that matter, and I herewith officially present "the keys of the City" to you and yours.

Neighborhoodly yours,
A. W. McALLISTER,
Mayor of Huntsville

On behalf of the Madison County Board of Commissioners, I wish to extend to you a hearty welcome to the opening of the Monte Sano Park and the celebration of that event, and hope that your visit will be a great pleasure to you, and one that you will remember with a good deal of interest.

The board expects to do everything in its power to make your stay enjoyable.

J. B. Van Valkenburg,
Chairman, Madison County Board of Commissioners.

Brief History of Huntsville

Born in 1804 beside a crystal-clear spring, cradled between majestic mountains, Huntsville received her name from John Hunt, one of the early settlers. In addition to the beautiful scenery, the fertility of the soil quickly attracted many colonists.

Within a period of four years, Madison County, with Huntsville as county seat, was created by the governor of Mississippi Territory. The population had reached 2,000.

So great was Gen. Andrew Jackson's belief in the future of this city that he bought large tracts of land, and frequented Green Bottom Inn, famous racing center, where now stands the A & M Institute at Normal.

The next ten years saw the appearance in Huntsville of Alabama's first bank, first newspaper and first cotton gin.

The important role which Hunt's City was to play in the history of Alabama was forecast, when it was chosen as a meeting place for the Territorial Constitutional Convention. To visit a city of such importance, came President Monroe, who was feted in true Southern style. Here Alabama entered the Union in 1819. Here her first governor was inaugurated. From this city came Alabama's first congressman, William Kelley.

During the years which followed, commercial development added to Huntsville's agricultural prosperity. The most famous industrial enterprise was the "Bell Factory," located on Flint river. This mill, which manufactured cotton cloth, marked a new era for the South.

In addition to the textile industry, there were a flour mill, "boot and shoe manufactory," "hat manufactory," "watch and clock making," and the manufacture of copper stills and pumps.

Transportation kept pace with manufacturing. The Flint and Paint Rock rivers were alive with cotton-loaded barges en route to New Orleans by way of the Tennessee and Mississippi rivers.

River transportation was supplemented by railroad facilities, when the Huntsville & Memphis division of the Memphis & Charleston Railway was constructed in 1851.

Religious and educational advantages were not lacking in Huntsville. By 1826, Presbyterian, Methodist, Cumberland Presbyterian and Episcopalian churches had been erected.

Reading, writing and arithmetic were taught by the Green Academy, Huntsville Military, Scientific and Classical School, Female Boarding School, Huntsville Female Academy and the Huntsville Seminary.

A public library had been maintained since 1826.

Three weekly newspapers added to Huntsville's prestige as a literary center.

Secession, Civil War and Reconstruction brought untold suffering and hardship to Huntsville. The Bell Battery, so-named because the churches had their bells smashed and cast into cannon for its use, served the Confederate cause.

Great destruction and loss of property attended the capture of Huntsville by the Federals in 1862.

Even harder to bear were the atrocities of Reconstruction, which the Ku Klux Klan helped to solve.

With the passage of years arose a new Huntsville, typical of the New South. Restoring prosperity brought greater industrialization. Steady growth, interrupted only by the World War, to which Huntsville contributed generously in both men and money, brought this city into the present era.

Today, Huntsville is fulfilling the dreams of greatness which her early patriots had. With a firm reliance on Hunt's Big Spring, which furnishes 2,000,000 gallons daily, Huntsville—clean, paved, well lighted—is pleased with her achievements.

With a population of more than 12,000 within her corporate limits of one square mile, Huntsville is serving more than twice that number of people.

Her retail business is in excess of $9,000,000 annually.

Bank deposits are approximately $5,000,000.

The annual value of her manufactured products is placed at $21,000,000.

Her industrial payroll averages more than $3,000,000 per year.

The largest cotton warehouse facilities in Alabama are located in Huntsville, whose county is the largest cotton-raising county in the state.

The largest shipments of nursery stock in the state are made from Huntsville.

Huntsville Churches

Few cities can boast of more interesting church history than Huntsville.

"The Early History of Huntsville" is a charming book written by Edward Chambers, B.A. From this book came many of the important facts of this article.

Huntsville has always been interested in those uplifting influences which make for richness of life in a community. Some of the first churches in Alabama were organized in Huntsville.

Those in the communion of the Presbyterian faith met and organized in 1828, and on October 25, 1832, commenced the erection of the first church of that denomination in the State. The present structure, situated at the corner of Lincoln and Gale streets, was built in 1838, and is being served by Rev. Neill G. Glasgow.

The Missionary Baptists were among the first to organize and build a church in the county. "Euse" was the first church established in the State by the Missionary Baptists. This church was organized in 1838, and was met in the neighborhood of Brax Park at Flint. Euse was officially moved from the country to town. The present First Baptist church is the outgrowth of and "Euse", and is being ably served by Dr. John J. Milford.

The Episcopalians began their work in Huntsville in 1830. The present beautiful church, so pleasing to the eye in its architectural beauty, was erected in 1868. Dr. Carey Gamble for more than 20 years served this church as rector, and recently retired, having reached the age limit, and will be succeeded by the Rev. Randolph R. Chaloner.

The Cumberland Presbyterian church was organized under the leadership of Rev. Robert Donnell

The present attractive church was built in 1885. Dr. J. W. Caldwell has ably served this church for nearly 40 years of its splendid history. He retired last year but continues to live in this city as one of our most honored and beloved citizens. A few months ago, the Rev. Flynn G. Humphreys accepted a call to this church, and has begun a pastorate which promises to be one of great usefulness.

Dr. Anson West, in his illuminating history of Alabama Methodism, says: "Methodism was present at the founding of things in Madison County. The very first white persons who touched the soil embraced in Madison County were Methodists. Before any courts were established in the county, Methodist societies were organized."

The Huntsville First Methodist church was made a station in 1823, and has continued so across these 117 years. The first Methodist Conference ever held in Alabama was held in Huntsville in 1828.

In addition to the First Church, the Methodists have five other churches here, all splendidly maintained. Holmes Street Church is managed by T. J. Chitwood, pastor. At First Church, Rev. B. B. Glasgow is the pastor. Rev. I. F. Hawkins is the capable presiding elder.

The Catholic Church of the Visitation was begun before the Civil War. The foundation had been laid and the corner stone set before Father Jeremiah Frederick Tracy left to serve as chaplain in the army.

After the war, the building, which is made of stone from Monte Sano, was completed. The altar is of Italian marble, and was given by Miss Mollie McOwen in memory of her father. The present priest is the Rev. Father Hourican.

In 1867, the building which houses the Randolph Street Church of Christ was built.

The Central Church of Christ completed its building of native sandstone last summer. Homer P. Reeves is the minister.

Regular services of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, have been held since 1914. This church was chartered as a branch of the Mother Church in Boston in 1883. Officers consist of first reader, second reader, Sunday school superintendent, librarian and a governing board of five members. This church maintains a free reading room in The Times building.

Huntsville, born in 1805! In the good year 1838, we, the Churches of Huntsville, salute! We are here to serve.

Agriculture in Madison County

Madison County, Alabama, is located in the northern part of the state, lying between the Tennessee river and the State of Tennessee.

It has an area of 411 square miles. The population, according to the 1930 census, was 64,623, with a rural farm population of 36,243. Of this population, 22,653 were white, and 13,982 colored.

There are 7,175 farms in the county. 1,961 are owners of their farms—1,511 white, and 449 colored. There are 3,104 white renters, and 1,994 colored renters.

Madison County is the largest cotton-producing county in the state. In 1927 on 84,000 acres in cotton, it produced 60,000 bales. The 1927 benefit payment and the subsidy that will be paid on the 1927 crop will amount to approximately $750,000.

The principal crops grown in Madison County are cotton, corn, tobacco, wheat, oats, alfalfa, hogs, cattle, sheep, hules, and horses. Our interest in permanent pastures has increased very rapidly in the last two or three years. We have over 200 pasture demonstrations of from one acre to 40 acres each.

The Lily Flagg one-variety community has changed Madison County from a short staple cotton to a better staple cotton. In this county, 90 to 95 per cent of the cotton grown is 15-16 inch staple and better. Much of the staple is over one inch. The majority of the cotton grown in this county 10 years ago was less than 7-8 inch staple.

Madison County is adapted to dairying and other live stock farming operations. We hope that in the near future our county will be one of the principal livestock producing counties in the state.

The county has 198.1 miles of paved roads, and 1296.8 miles of gravel roads. These roads are so constructed that nearly every farmer in the county is close enough to a good road to put him in easy reach of a market for his products.

The tobacco produced in this county is of the white burley type, and has brought the highest price on the Fayetteville market of any tobacco sold there.

Madison County is also well supplied with an abundance of springs that afford good fishing, and a number of these springs are used for the production of water cream, which is shipped all over the country and has become famous for its fine quality.

Industry and Commerce

Huntsville is the largest cotton textile center in Alabama.

It has three very large plants—the Lincoln, the Merrimack and the Dallas—and a smaller one—the Erwin Manufacturing Co.

In full operation, these four concerns employ more than 4,000 persons.

Location of these plants in Huntsville, in the heart of the largest cotton-growing section of the State, provides a ready market for the staple grown by farmers, at a premium of $1 to $2.50 a bale above what they would be able to get for their crop, if these mills were not located in Huntsville.

These four mills consumed, in the 12 months ending Sept. 30, 1937, 73,841 bales of cotton that cost them almost $5,000,000.

They paid in wages to their employees more than $2,000,000.

They contributed in taxes—federal, state, city and county—approximately $140,000.

For supplies, and for electric power, they spent more than $800,000.

The total gross expenditures of the four mills in Huntsville, during a year's steady operations, are approximately $10,000,000.

The value of the manufactured products from these mills is more than $20,000,000.

Huntsville also is a very large cotton warehousing center. More than a half dozen bonded concerns have space for warehousing between 75,000 and 100,000 bales of cotton.

There are several smaller manufacturing companies in and around Huntsville. Chief are the Huntsville Fiber and Veneer Works, Dixie Broom and Mattress Co., the Alabama Cotton Oil Mill and the Huntsville Foundry Works.

HUNTSVILLE THEATRES

Recreation and Sports

The question of a place to hunt and fish has become one of our great problems, and that problem is being solved nowhere in North America as it is in the Tennessee Valley area.

The TVA has impounded waters from five huge dams. With several smaller ones, augmented by our numerous rivers and small streams, these waters become a perfect habitat for every species of fresh water fish.

To assure that these waters will abound in such species as they are capable of supporting, the TVA is now building on Elk river, in Limestone county, one of the largest fish hatcheries in the world. Fish from this hatchery will be used to keep the waters back of the TVA dams permanently stocked with an abundant supply of fish.

The conservation councils of every county in this area are now building, or planning to build, hatcheries to keep cold water rivers and streams stocked to assure a constant supply of such game fish as they support.

Thus, the Tennessee Valley is destined to become a fisherman's paradise in the very near future. The hunting possibilities of the Tennessee Valley are as great as the fishing possibilities. Sixty-four per cent of the land of this area has never been in agriculture, and is mountainous and not suited for such. Added to this are the thousands of acres of land being planted back into forests by private citizens.

To these thousands there should be added the more than 1,000,000 acres being taken out of agriculture by the TVA and converted into lakes, and the forests now being planted on the contours of these lakes.

The TVA now owns 17,200 acres of Madison county. Since 1933, 7,140 acres of this land have been planted in forest, and some 1,500 to 2,000 acres more will be planted next season. The CCC enrollees have planted 501 acres, once in agriculture, back to forest, and the State Commission of Forestry has planted 200 acres in the last three years, making a total of 7,841 acres of land once in agriculture already returned to forest in Madison county.

The program for the whole valley is in equal proportion to what it is in Madison county. Thus we see the hunting possibilities of this vast area.

The U. S. government has established a game reservation in Morgan, Limestone, and Madison counties, extending 18 miles above the highway crossing of the river at Denton; that will assure an abundance of all kinds of game, and serve to attract migratory water fowl to the valley area in such proportion that there will be a supply with the opening of every season.

The State Department of Game Conservation is rapidly making plans to do its part in restocking game birds and animals for this vast land area.
