A Brief History of Huntsville

Into "Old Madison County," a part of the Mississippi Territory, came in 1804 a young man named John Hunt, seeking a site on which to build himself a home. He found a big flowing spring gushing from under the giant bluff, surrounded by giant forest trees and on a sloping rise from this spring he built himself a log hut on the banks of the branch flowing from this spring and today that site is named in his honor, Huntsville.

Where then only a few hardy souls dared to brave the Indian wrath and dangers, today 30,000 people live in peace and harmony in the greatest little city in the entire Tennessee Valley, the city of Huntsville, "Heart of the Tennessee Valley."

Whether John Hunt was the first to settle in this section has always been a mooted question. That he was the first to build a log home here, is not disputed and so he can rightfully be called "The Father of Huntsville."

Nor was the first settlement around this great spring known as Huntsville. Between 1805 and 1809, we are told, Madison County was created and Twickenham became the chief center of activity. In fact on the 22nd day of December, 1809, the Territorial Legislature created a commission to lay out the town, and when so laid out it was to be "called and known by the name of Twickenham." At that time the settlement had between two hundred and three hundred inhabitants. The name "Twickenham" is supposed to have been selected by Leroy Pope, a wealthy man, public spirited and liberal. He is supposed to have selected that name because of his admiration for the poet, Alexander Pope, whose English home was named Twickenham.

Pursuant to the authority granted this commission early in 1810, laid out the town, including in its limits, about sixty acres. This site, including the "Big Spring" had been previously purchased by Martin Beatty from the "Tennessee Land Company," for the sum of $3.00 per acre and a settlement was made with the United States Government for his claim. This was then purchased by Leroy Pope for the exorbitant price of $23.00 per acre so that the townsite might be created.

The first lot in Twickenham was sold on July 4th, 1810, and soon thereafter John Hickman was awarded the contract for the construction of the first court house, which was completed in 1818 and stood upon the site of the present county structure.

After much hickering among the people of the city, including removal of the court house to various sites, the name of Twickenham was changed to Huntsville, by an act of the Territorial Legislature on November 28, 1811 that specified that "From and after the passage of this act, the county town of Madison county--now called Twickenham--shall be called and known by the name of Huntsville."

Both Madison county and Huntsville enjoyed a most remarkable growth. Never was either a boom town, but always its growth has been steady and stable. Its citizenship has always been of the very highest and from this section has gone many of the leaders of state, section and nation and its citizenship has been honored by having many prominent officials of each come from Huntsville and Madison county.

During the Indian Wars General Andrew Jackson, "Old Hickory," visited Huntsville. So impressed was he with the city that he bought large tracts of lands around the city and on one of these, was located Green Bottom Inn where he frequently came to race his horses, this being on the present site of the Alabama Agricultural & Industrial Institute, at Normal.

So rapid did Huntsville grow in importance that the First Constitutional Convention, wherein Alabama became a state of the Union, was held in this city in 1819. The site of this convention was a brick

FAMOUS BIG SPRING—Discovered by John Hunt and Mr. Bean in 1805. The daily output is 24,000,000 gallons and this has always been the source of the city's water supply.	MASONIC TEMPLE—On the corner of Lincoln and Williams Streets. This is the oldest lodge in Alabama. General Andrew Jackson attended meetings here in the early days of Huntsville's history.	CARLOS G. SMITH SCHOOL—706 Adams Avenue. Here a famous private school was operated during the tragic days of Reconstruction by Dr. Smith, who later became the sixth president of the University of Alabama in 1874.
STONE MARKER—On the corner of Gates and Franklin Streets marks the site of the first State House and the meeting place of the territorial legislature and the first state legislature.	HISTORICAL MARKER—On the corner of East Holmes and Lincoln Streets showing the site of Andrew Jackson's camp with his Tennessee Volunteers en route to the Battle of New Orleans.	MAPLE HILL CEMETERY—On California Street where can be found the graves of seven former governors of Alabama. Here also are buried some nationally known industrialists and many prominent Confederate soldiers.
FIRST NATIONAL BANK BUILDING—This structure was built in 1835 and was the home office of the first State Bank. Today one can see the quarters once used to house slaves held in security.	EPISCOPAL CHURCH OF THE NATIVITY—On the corner of Green and Davis Streets. This church was built prior to the War Between the States. It is regarded as one of the finest examples of Gothic architecture in America.	REVOLUTIONARY MARKER—At the North door of the county court house. A stone holder bearing the names of the eighty-four Revolutionary Veterans buried in Madison County.

Tennessee Valley Area
For the past six years, the Tennessee Valley Authority, the Civilian Conservation Corp. and other federal and state agencies have been busy with the gigantic development that has taken place in this area. With the construction of Joe Wheeler, Guntersville and other Dams, adding to the already existing Wilson Dam, the TVA has changed this beautiful, fertile region to a more beautiful "Land of Beautiful Lakes." There are over 200,000 acres of water in the Wilson, Wheeler and Guntersville reservoirs alone. These vast impounded waters offer one of America's finest "vacationers' paradise." There are an abundance of game fish to be found in these waters the year round and during the hunting seasons these lakes and the lands adjacent thereto serve as homes for many species of game. The Black Warrior Forest is one of the finest deer preserves in the world. Near Athens, Alabama is the world's largest fish hatchery. In order to conserve this abundance of wildlife and to propagate fish, game and natural resources in the valley, the Tennessee Valley Wildlife Federation was organized by sportsmen from the eight counties bordering the river. A number of annual occasions, which attract national attention, are held by various communities in this area. Aside from the Monte Sano Festival, Guntersville stages its Dixie Boat Races at which over 60,000 people were present in 1939. Decatur holds its annual Froch	Water Rodeo with many victories from several neighboring states. This region is especially rich in historical significance and scenic beauty. Thousands of people each year visit the homes of such famous Americans as Fighting Joe Wheeler, the Ribbs, O'Neale, Walkers, Helen Keller, and many others. Many beautiful mountain parks and lake-side camps, together with natural beauty, makes this area an ideal tourists mecca. Space here is entirely too limited to describe the beauty and charm of many beautiful points found in Jackson County, or the fascination of the Muscle Shoals District, or hundreds of other places that offers the real southern hospitality, for which the valley area is famous.

Legend of Monte Sano

Several beautiful legends have been built around the lovely and romantic Monte Sano. The one most generally known is that of a romance between an Indian maid, named Monte, and a white man.

The white man wooed this daughter of an Indian chief, but she refused his offer. She knew others of his race would come, ready to change the land in which she had lived her carefree life.

Axes and fallen trees! Paleface huts and smoking chimneys! Cleared fields and beaten paths! These pictures flashed through her mind as his words fell impassably upon her ears. She was stolid with an inherent firmness.

Not the slightest stir from even a falling leaf was noticeable upon Monte Sano to disturb them as they talked, seated upon a ledge overlooking a heavily wooded valley, which had seen only a few of the covered wagons in which the white man had come. He sat with his arm around her, his mouth pressed against her ebony hair, so smoothly held by the ribbon he had given her. As if in deep thought, she leaned slightly forward, her head bowed, her hands folded in her lap.

"When the air was sweet and balmy,
Softly blown by Southern breeze,
Indian maid and paleface lover
Loved health the forest trees.
"Now they climb the rugged mountain,
Gaze at last its lofty height,
Sitting by a giant boulder,
Gaze upon a wondrous sight.

"Hill and valley, glen and wild-wood,
In a panoramic view,
Waving tree tops, blooming dewies,
They streamlets trickling through."

The Indian maid and her paleface lover sat in silence broken only by the man's pleading words. But they were not alone. Concealed in the rocks behind them lay a young brave, deeply torn with grief, for he, too, loved the chief-tain's daughter. Stealthily, he had followed them each foot of the way.

"Must he lose his childhood's
-kiss,
Will the white man win her heart?"

Leave him crushed, his fond hopes blasted,
Living from his kind apart?"

The warrior was battling with a love which had followed him since he first had entered the forests with this dark-eyed girl. Her memory had led him into more than one battle, or had encouraged him during his sojourns with other young braves of his tribe. Now this paleface had come between them.

"He hears the white man, 'Darling Monte,
Tell me I may ever stay
With you in this land of beauty;
Do not darling, tell me nay!"

These words brought an uncontrollable shudder from the young brave;
"But she answered not, for near her.

In her own tongue whispered
low,
Pleaded her Indian lover softly,
"Monte, say no! Monte, say no!"

"Then she turned to the white man
Bade him to his friends return,
Should she wed him, ever after
For her own her heart would yearn.

"She would wed her Indian lover,
They would roam the forest wild;
Not for her the white man's dwelling.

"She was ever nature's child."
This ended that romantic scene upon the mountain many, many years ago. A white settler's love refused by an Indian girl, to keep unspoiled her beloved forest!

"Years have passed, and man and maiden
Each a lowly grave has found;
But their spirits ever wander
Through their happy hunting ground.

"But to us they've left the
mountain,
Glorious in the sun's glow,
As when christened by the warrior,
"Monte, say no! Monte, say no!"

In this way Monte Sano got its name, according to the legend of an unknown author. From the depths of a warrior's torn heart behind the rocks that day came a combination of syllables which was to be carried in time to many distant corners.

Monte Sano Park

The development of Monte Sano State Park, now the show place of the South for tourists and vacationists, began early in 1906, with the purchase of approximately 2,000 acres of table land by Madison county.

Since that time, this land has been converted into a huge playground — a natural paradise for outdoor sports, camping parties, picnics, lovers of nature, hikers, adventurers and explorers.

The park, developed primarily by the National Park Service, with the main labor coming from CCC boys, is situated 1,800 feet above sea level. The temperature in the park is usually 12 to 20 degrees cooler in the day time and 8 to 15 degrees cooler at night than the temperature in the valley. The air is pure and bracing, the breezes come up over the plateau in health giving quantities, and the sunshine is ever present to invigorate and restore.

Although certain areas have been preserved in their native state, other sections of the park have been opened up so that the beauty and charm of such a spot may be easily accessible to the average tourist. Hard-surfaced roads give two beautiful approaches to the park. Other winding roads make practically every scenic point available by automobile.

Monte Sano State Park has grown rapidly since its beginning. It is becoming known far and wide, particularly throughout the Tennessee Valley, as truly one of the most picturesque resorts in the South.

But with its maintenance now a part of the state park system, other developments — especially that of Natural Well — are expected to make the park the most attractive visiting place anywhere.

Monte Sano Festival

In the summer of 1938, the Monte Sano State Park was nearing completion and it was during this season that the Park was widely used for the first time. A group of interested citizens planned an official opening of the park, which took place on Thursday, August 25, under the general chairmanship of Robert K. Bell, a local attorney. The entire community became interested in this opening celebration and everyone sought to make it a big civic success. Good-will tours publicized this event throughout the Tennessee Valley Area.

The 1938 program opened with a colorful parade, consisting of many beautiful floats entered by local firms, visiting bands, a mounted section, historic rigs, distinguished guests, and other features. After a sight-seeing tour of Huntsville, its celebrated homes and historic points of interest, a motorcade proceeded to the park area where the official dedication of the park took place. The principal speaker on this occasion was Honorable William B. Bankhead, Speaker of the U. S. House of Representatives and a former Huntsvillian.

Other features of the 1938 event were an inspection of the park facilities, band concerts, a huge barbecue sponsored by the American Legion, a historic pageant portraying "Huntsville's March of Progress" which was beautifully written by Weston Britt and most ably directed by Miss Nancy Pierce. The concluding event on the program was the "Queen's Ball" sponsored by the Acme Club. Queen Monte Sano I was Miss Margaret Brodie Hall.

This occasion was attended by many dignitaries of the state and nation, including Statesmen, industrial leaders, park officials, historians, and civic leaders. Many thousand visitors were present.

The opening celebration of the park in 1938 proved to be such a success that its sponsors, the Chamber of Commerce, and the community generally decided to make this Festival an annual occasion.

A Brief History of Huntsville

Into "Old Madison County," a part of the Mississippi Territory, came in 1804 a young man named John Hunt, seeking a site on which to build himself a home. He found a big flowing spring gushing from under the giant bluff, surrounded by giant forest trees and on a sloping rise from this spring he built himself a log hut on the banks of the branch flowing from this spring and today that site is named in his honor, Huntsville.

Where then only a few hardy souls dared to brave the Indian wrath and dangers, today 30,000 people live in peace and harmony in the greatest little city in the entire Tennessee Valley, the city of Huntsville, "Heart of the Tennessee Valley."

Whether John Hunt was the first to settle in this section has always been a mooted question. That he was the first to build a log home here, is not disputed and so he can rightfully be called "The Father of Huntsville."

Nor was the first settlement around this great spring known as Huntsville. Between 1805 and 1808 we are told, Madison County was created and Twickenham became the chief center of activity. In fact on the 22nd day of December, 1809, the Territorial Legislature created a commission to lay out the town, and when so laid out it was to be "called and known by the name of Twickenham." At that time the settlement had between two hundred and three hundred inhabitants. The name "Twickenham" is supposed to have been selected by Leroy Pope, a wealthy man, public spirited and liberal. He is supposed to have selected that name because of his admiration for the poet, Alexander Pope, whose English home was named Twickenham.

Pursuant to the authority granted this commission early in 1810, laid out the town, including in its limits, about sixty acres. This site, including the "Big Spring," had been previously purchased by Martin Beatty from the "Tennessee Land Company," for the sum of $1.00 per acre and a settlement was made with the United States Government for his claim. This was then purchased by Leroy Pope for the exorbitant price of $25.00 per acre so that the townsite might be created.

The first lot in Twickenham was sold on July 4th, 1810, and soon thereafter John Hickman was awarded the contract for the construction of the first court house, which was completed in 1816 and stood upon the site of the present county structure.

After much hickering among the people of the city, including removal of the court house to various sites, the name of Twickenham was changed to Huntsville, by an act of the Territorial Legislature on November 25, 1811 that specified that "From and after the passage of this act, the county town of Madison county—now called Twickenham—shall be called and known by the name of Huntsville."

Both Madison county and Huntsville enjoyed a most remarkable growth. Never was either a boom town, but always its growth has been steady and stable. Its citizenship has always been of the very highest and from this section has gone many of the leaders of state, section and nation and its citizenship has been honored by having many prominent officials of each come from Huntsville and Madison county.

During the Indian Wars General Andrew Jackson, "Old Hickory" visited Huntsville. So impressed was he with the city that he bought large tracts of land around the city and on one of these, was located Green Bottom Inn where he frequently came to race his horses, this being on the present site of the Alabama Agricultural & Industrial Institute, at Normal.

So rapid did Huntsville grow in importance that the First Constitutional Convention, wherein Alabama became a state of the Union, was held in this city in 1819. The site of this convention was a brick building located at the corner of Franklin and Gains streets, just off the Court House Square, now marked by a bronze and stone marker. This gave Huntsville the name "The Mother City of Alabama." To the site of this assembly came President James Monroe in June 1819, to be guest at a banquet given in his honor.

Huntsville is the oldest English settled village in the state of Alabama. The first Church in Alabama was built in Huntsville, the first newspaper in the state was published here, the first bank in Alabama was in Huntsville. The first cotton mill in the South and the most famous industrial enterprise of its time was the "Bell Factory," located on Flint River, that manufactured cotton cloth. The first Masonic Lodge in Alabama was formed in Huntsville. The first cotton gin in the state was located here and Madison county has long been noted as the leading cotton county east of the Mississippi River.

Manufacturing became a Huntsville specialty, the first flour mill in Alabama being located here, along with boot and shoe manufacturers, lumber plants, a hat factory, manufacture of copper stills, pumps and various other products of early times.

Transportation for Huntsville kept pace with the early development. The Flint and Paint Rock being transportation facilities for barges of cotton en route to New Orleans by way of the Tennessee and Mississippi Rivers and the Tennessee became the chief method of transportation for the section. In 1851 the Huntsville & Memphis Railway was built and this became a division of the Memphis & Charleston Railway, one of the early transportation lines of the South. Huntsville became the gateway to the Tennessee River and much highway traffic between the Cumberland and Tennessee Rivers passed through this city.

Huntsville's Big Spring formed the nucleus for the formation of the South's first water system and its importance has continued to increase with time. Huntsville's water system has always been its chief asset and as the city develops it will continue to prove even more valuable.

As an educational center Huntsville boasted its Green Academy, Huntsville Military Institute, Scientific and Classic School, Female Boarding School, Huntsville Female Academy and Huntsville Seminary being among the leading cultural facilities of the section.

A public library had been maintained since 1820. Three weekly newspapers added to Huntsville's prestige as a literary center.

Secession, Civil War and Reconstruction brought untold suffering and hardship to Huntsville. The Bell Battery, so-named because the churches had their bells smelted and cast into cannon for its use, served the Confederate cause.

Great destruction and loss of property attended the capture of Huntsville by the Federals in 1862. Even harder to bear were the atrocities of Reconstruction, which the Ku Klux Klan helped to solve a new Huntsville, typical of the New South. Returning prosperity brought greater industrialization. Steady growth, interrupted only by the World War, to which Huntsville contributed generously in both men and money, brought this city into the present era.

Today, Huntsville is fulfilling the dreams of greatness which her early patriots had. With a firm reliance on Hunt's Big Spring, which furnishes 24,000,000 gallons daily, Huntsville—clean, paved, well lighted—is pleased with her achievements.

With a population of more than 12,000 within her corporate limits of one square miles, Huntsville is serving more than twice that number of people.

Her retail business is in excess of $9,000,000 annually. The annual value of her manufactured products is placed at $21,000,000.

Her industrial payroll averages more than $1,000,000 per year. The largest cotton warehouse facilities in Alabama are located in Huntsville, whose county is the largest cotton-raising county in the state.

The largest shipments of nursery stock in the state are made from Huntsville.

Added to these commercial advantages are modern churches, splendid schools, excellent hotels, a well equipped hospital, and civic organizations which are working for the good of Huntsville.

The latest project in which Huntsville is taking pride is the Monte Sano State Park, which is 2,000 feet above sea level. The park, covering 2,000 acres of mountain table land, has picnic areas, mineral springs, cabins of mountain stone, recreation building and stables. The natural facilities of this beautiful park are to be enjoyed by Huntsville and shared with her neighbors.

Famous Landmarks

FAMOUS BIG SPRING—Discovered by John Hunt and Mr. Bean in 1805. The daily output is 24,000,000 gallons and this has always been the source of the city's water supply.

MASONIC TEMPLE—On the corner of Lincoln and Williams Streets. This is the oldest lodge in Alabama. General Andrew Jackson attended meetings here in the early days of Huntsville's history.

CARLOS G. SMITH SCHOOL—706 Adams Avenue. Here a famous private school was operated during the tragic days of Reconstruction by Dr. Smith, who later became the sixth president of the University of Alabama in 1874.

STONE MARKER—On the corner of Gates and Franklin Streets marks the site of the first State House and the meeting place of the territorial legislature and the first state legislature.

HISTORICAL MARKER—On the corner of East Holmes and Lincoln Streets showing the site of Andrew Jackson's camp with his Tennessee Volunteers en route to the Battle of New Orleans.

MAPLE HILL CEMETERY—On California Street where can be found the graves of seven former governors of Alabama. Here also are buried some nationally known industrialists and many prominent Confederate soldiers.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK BUILDING—This structure was built in 1835 and was the home office of the first State Bank. Today one can see the quarters once used to house slaves held as security.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH OF THE NATIVITY—On the corner of Green and East Streets. This church was built prior to the War Between the States. It is regarded as one of the finest examples of Gothic architecture in America.

REVOLUTIONARY MARKER—At the North door of the county court house. A stone holder bearing the names of the eighty-four Revolutionary Veterans buried in Madison County.

Majestic Madison

Dame Nature could not have been more generous when she smiled upon Madison County. Agriculture, Industry and Recreation, her three greatest assets, combine to make this section one of the brightest spots on the horizon of prosperity.

Madison has an area of 811 square miles of soil that is incomparable in that it will produce most anything that will grow. Its population now is well over the 75,000 mark. There are over 7,000 farms. Madison is the largest cotton producing county in the state and one of the largest in the entire south. Year after year it produces well above 50,000 bales. Livestock and dairying play important roles in the farm program supplemented by tobacco raising, corn, milk, peaches, apples, potatoes in abundance. It is the Wilter Cross center of the world and is one of, if not the largest, nursery centers of the South.

Industrially speaking, it ranks at the top of textile enterprises in the state with three large mills, Lincoln, Merrimack and Dallas, employing in the proximity of 5,000 people with payrolls that make Huntsville a bustling thriving business center. Textile products such as Wilton sheeting and Domestic, Army and Navy Duck, and print cloth, used over the entire world, are manufactured here. Many other products, too numerous to mention, also brighten the industrial picture.

In the heart of the great Tennessee Valley, Madison's recreational facilities are second to none. Monte Sano is a mecca for tourists and vacationists as well as a haven for those who love natural beauty. Some 1,800 feet above sea level, it is one of the highest spots in the State. The largest inland fishing preserve in the entire country bounds it on the south, the great Tennessee River. Thousands are attracted to this form of sport from all sections. Ducks and other game are plentiful.

Madison is one of the most historical counties in the South. It was in 1805 that John Hunt and Mr. Bean encamped as the first white settlers at the famous Big Spring. It was in Huntsville that Alabama entered the Union as a state in 1819.

Madison has had its ups and downs, but is fortunate in that after every set-back it has forged ahead to even greater attainments and, with all of its rich natural blessings, is certain to reach its rightful place in the sun speedily.

Monte Sano Recreation Facilities

Possibly the most intense work in Monte Sano State Park the past two years has been toward developing recreation facilities.

Today, the park has many means of providing the outdoor features of its visitors. First, the picnic area of some 10 acres is among the most popular spots used daily. Twenty-four open grills are available for cooking and barbecuing meats, tables are distributed over the area and are kept clean at all times for spreading picnic lunches. Two stone-built picnic shelters allow family outings—rain or shine.

A recreation area consisting of four acres has been developed recently. It has been prepared into tennis courts, badminton courts, horse-shoe courses, volley-ball courts, archery range and angler's fish-o-course.

Miles of mountain bridge paths, scores of hiking trails with over-look shelters in which to rest and enjoy the lovely scenic views are other outdoor advantages.

A riding academy at which beautiful horses may be rented is kept open all times.

Natural Well, destined to become the leading attraction of the park when it is opened to the public, is being explored at the present, with the purpose of determining how it may be developed to the best use of visitors.

The sportsman will enjoy, aside from the many features in the park area, the pleasure of fishing, hunting in season, frog-gigging, boating and swimming in the vast TVA waters.

Industry and Commerce
As an industrial and commercial center, Huntsville is the hub of Northern Alabama and much of Southern Tennessee depends on the city as a market center, thus making it Huntsville the leading retail market of this section. Huntsville today boasts of three of the largest textile plants of the South—the Lincoln, Merrimack and Dallas mills being located in the city. Each has a complete industrial village located in its immediate section and these three villages are in reality a part of Huntsville's industrial and every day life. The Erwin Mill Village is also a valuable addition to the city and when this plant is again in operation will be an integral part of the industrial life as well. With such valuable outlets for cotton, it is not to be wondered that Madison County is and has long been noted as the leading cotton producing county of the South. These mills cut-tern grown by Madison county farmers and they offer the farmers a premium on the cotton they are able to use in their plants. These plants consume annually more than 75,000 bales of cotton. These same mills furnish Huntsville with the most valuable pay roll, amounting to more than $1,000,000 each year. They find in Huntsville a high class labor that few sections can offer and they provide their employees with every modern facility, as well as homes and in some instances are un-erminated in any section. They also pay to the farmers more than $5,000,000 for their cotton each year. They pay in tax- es, federal, state and county, and city, approximately $2,000,000 and spend more than $600,000 for supplies and electricity. The value of their manufactured products, from these mills, amounts to more than $20,000,000 annually and the gross ex- penditures of these plants, during a year's steady operation, is approximately $10,000,000. Huntsville is one of the largest cotton warehousing centers of Alabama, more than half a dozen large warehouses being located in the city and they have facilities ranging from 25,000 to 100,000 bales of cotton. Huntsville is the home of the Chase Nurseries, located at Chase, Alabama, nearby, that has been in operation here for fifty years, observing their golden anniversary this year. This is one of the city's most valuable assets. In addition Madison county boasts of six other active nurseries that go to make this county a leader among Southern nursery centers, these being the Huntsville Wholesale Nurseries, J. G. Kelly & son, Alabama Nursery & Landscape Co., Myers Nursery Co., Newber, Alabama Nursery & F. D. Dillman. These companies operate in all sections of the country. Another valuable addition to Huntsville's commercial life is the production of water cran- nery of the nation's most valua- ble commodities that has been de- veloped here, Huntsville is the home of the Dennis Water Cran- nery Co. A new industry that has re- cently come to Huntsville is the Martin Shapping & Stone Co. who recently acquired the old Home Electric and are now beginning production there. The Seaboard Car- corporation of New Orleans and the Welch & Williams Manufacturing Co. of Shelbyville have both recently es- tablished their manufacturing plants in Hunt- ville.

Tennessee Valley Area For the past six years, the Tennessee Valley Authority, the Civilian Conservation Corp, and other federal and state agencies have been busy with the gigantic development that has taken place in this area. With the construction of Joe Wheeler, Guntersville and other Dams, adding to the already existing Wilson Dam, the TVA has changed this beautiful, fertile region to a more beautiful "Land of Beautiful Lakes." There are over 200,000 acres of water in the Wilson, Wheeler and Guntersville reservoirs alone. These vast impounded waters offer one of America's finest "vacationer's paradise." There are an abundance of game fish to be found in these waters the year round and during the hunting seasons these lakes and the lands adjacent thereto serve as homes for many species of game. The Black Warrior Forest is one of the finest deer preserves in the world. Near Athens, Alabama is the world's largest fish hatchery. In order to conserve this abundance of wildlife and to propagate fish, game and natural resources in the valley, the Tennessee Valley Wildlife Federation was organized by sportsmen from the eight counties bordering the river. A number of annual occasions, which attract national attention, are held by various communities in this area. Aside from the Monte Sano Festival, Guntersville stages its Dixie Boat Races at which over 60,000 people were present in 1925. Decatur holds its annual Fresh Water Rodeo with many visitors from several neighboring states. This region is especially rich in historical significance and scenic beauty. Thousands of people each year visit the homes of such famous Americans as Fighting Joe Wheeler, the Bibbs, O'Neals, Walkers, Helen Keller, and many others. Many beautiful mountain parks and lake-side camps, together with natural beauty, makes this area an ideal tourists mecca. Space here is entirely too limited to describe the beauty and charm of many beautiful points found in Jackson County, or the fascination of the Muscle Shoals District, or hundreds of other places that offers the real southern hospitality, for which the valley area is famous.
