Classes were resumed at the college in the fall of 1866, under the guidance of the Rev. John G. Wilson who was again appointed president by the Tennessee Conference. Since many parents could not afford to pay tuition for their children during the Reconstruction period, attendance was greatly decreased. Then too, the building and furniture had sustained considerable damage during the days when the college had been used as a hospital. However, even under these conditions, the school gradually began to regain its former status among the southern schools for girls.

In 1870, when the Huntsville Church was included in the North Alabama Conference, the responsibility of the college was transferred from the Tennessee Conference to this assembly.

Dr. G. W. Price, the first president of the college appointed by the North Alabama ^{Conference} College, took office in the fall of 1872 and remained in that position until 1880, when Dr. Amos B. Jones succeeded him.

For a period of almost twenty-one years, between July 1867 and March 1888, the college was involved in litigation as a result of indebtedness allegedly due Dr. George M. Everhart and the four gentlemen ^{The} ^{against the Huntsville Female College} This bill was first filed with the Registrar in Chancery for the 29th District of the Northern Division of the state of Alabama, on July 16, 1867. After being dismissed from the Chancery Court, the complaint was subsequently filed on February 22, 1876 in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Alabama. When the Circuit Court rendered a decision in favor of the
