PREFACE.

THE author has no apology to make for writing and publishing this history. He feels that an excuse must, from its very nature, be either in vain or unnecessary. The book itself must be his justification or his condemnation.

He has of course written, as every man must write, from his own point of view. While claiming that it is his right to do this, he is not unaware that there are other points of view, and to their occupants he cheerfully concedes the right to criticise his sense of proportion.

It should be borne in mind that this is a history, not of bishops, priests, or parishes, but of a diocesan Church. Hence only those personal and parochial records appear that set forward the author's purpose. Matters of detail have been unhesitatingly sacrificed to comprehensiveness of statement.

To those who have furnished much interesting information and many valuable documents, especially was "Potest Tolerari." Those men were our grandfathers. Their bitter prejudice still washes at our feet after two generations.

So the Church had to await her time and opportunity. Here and there, throughout the territory of Alabama, a few Church families, emigrants from the states, were thrown together, and irregularly held lay-services, supplemented at long intervals by the chance visit of some clerical relative, friend, or itinerant. Many of these early Churchmen became discouraged at the apparent forgetfulness of their Mother and united themselves with sectarian bodies, chiefly Methodist and Baptist, whose noble, self-sacrificing preachers kept in the vanguard of civilization, alongside, and sometimes ahead of, the gambling-den and the whisky-hell. But here and there were forming nuclei of the large congregations that are now found in Mobile, Montgomery, Selma, Birmingham, and Huntsville, and of parishes elsewhere that are only awaiting an uncrystallized material on which to work.

SUCH was the condition of affairs when in November, 1826, the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society of the Church, then five years old, directed the Rev. Robert Davis "to visit the State of Alabama and advance the interests of the Society and religion" there. Shortly after his appointment Mr. Davis set out on what was then a long and tedious journey; but being detained on his way by illness he did not reach Tuscaloosa, his objective point, till the winter of 1827.

Tuscaloosa was then a small village, eight years of age, and with a population of not more than five or six hundred souls. But within the past year it had been made the State capital, and a considerable population was certain in the near future. At any rate, Mr. Davis thought that with the capital as his center of operations he could the better extend the influence and ministrations of the Church into other villages and hamlets of the interior. Here, therefore, he remained several months, ministering constantly to the half-dozen Church families that had moved in, but apparently making no missionary excursions. On January 7, 1828, Christ Church parish was organized, and the building of a parish church undertaken.

Whether Mr. Davis had any idea of remaining in CHAPTER XV.

PARISH LIFE.

DOMESTIC details reveal character more truthfully than do widely-heralded deeds wrought before the public gaze. The gossip and small-talk of parish life tell us much that never comes to light in the study of diocesan institutions and of ecclesiastical development. To these it is purposed to turn for a while.

Only once in this episcopate did the diocese attempt to intermeddle in affairs strictly pastoral, parochial, or personal. In 1849 the Convention received, as part of a new system of canons, a series of provisions entitled "Of Lay Discipline." The four canons of the series provided: (1) That every communicant should have daily family prayers; (2) That heads of families should instruct those under them, and send their children to the minister's catechetical instructions; (3) That notorious transgressors should be excluded, as from Holy Communion, so from Sponsorship; and (4) That the names of confirmed persons neglecting the Lord's Supper for the space of twelve months should be stricken from the roll of communicants. This attempt to enforce natural duty and to supersede pastoral responsibility by legislative enactment received short shrift from the Convention of 1850, when the canons were finally acted upon. Only the fourth provision met with favor; it was in force just one year, and no similar experiment in legislation has since been attempted.

The question, What constitutes a communicant? met with more uncertain response than than meets it now. The present substitution of the words "Confirmed Persons" for the word "Communicant" was not often made in those days. A communicant was, in general, not merely a potential communicant; he was an actual participant in the Supper of the Lord. Consequently the number of confirmed persons residing in a parish cannot be determined from records extant. Neither are we assisted in arriving at the approximate number of the confirmed by the fact that actual communicants are about seventy-five per cent. of the confirmed, for not only was the distinction between confirmed persons and de facto communicants not universal, but we cannot say positively what clergymen made the distinction and what did not. The only inference that can be made reasonably is, that a parish reporting twenty communicants was larger than is a parish reporting the same number today; but how much larger, it is impossible to estimate.

Of course the universal American custom of "calling" ministers held sway from the beginning. In many parishes it was the custom to call a minister for a single year.* If he was liked he was re-elected from year to year. If he was not liked he was quietly dropped when the term of partnership expired, and another minister was chosen. In this way the awkward-single year early in his ministry he was rector of St. James' Church, Wilmington, N. C., the largest parish in the diocese, and the experience of that single year sufficed for a life-time. The climate was insalubrious. The high pressure and the thronging anxieties of a city parish, allowing little room for mental and spiritual refreshment, were incompatible with his nature and his methods. He felt himself called to be a preacher of righteousness—if of the righteousness of Jesus Christ, so too (and not less) of the righteousness of those who were called of Christ. To do his appointed work thoroughly he must have time for study and meditation, and opportunity to grasp and elucidate root principles, without which all preaching, however earnest and attractive, is superficial in nature and ephemeral in effect. So, after this one year in Wilmington he went back to Virginia, and entered upon his work among the country parishes, whence no urban or metropolitan calls afterwards seduced him. Five years he ministered in Clarke county, three years in Loudoun and Fauquier, and from 1853 to 1858 in Bedford.

Everywhere his preaching was marvellous in effect, causing multitudes to turn from sin unto righteousness. The reason was patent: The grace of God was supplemented by the labors of man. The preacher placed himself en rapport with his hearers. Not like a certain archer of old did he shoot his arrow at a venture. Never did he rest content with the bald statement of abstract principles. His sermons were preached every one to cover the case of a person several lots were purchased to meet the hygienic demands of the present and the certain development of the future. Yet by virtue of the liberality of Mobile, the frugality of the deaconesses, and the sagacity of the Bishop, it came to pass that one day in 1896 Bishop Wilmer was able to announce to the people of Alabama that the Church Homes for Orphans had completed their endowment fund of $40,000, and that this amount was securely invested in registered bonds of the State of Alabama.

IT is a wide-spread delusion that the letter and the spirit of any law or agreement stand in such relationship to each other that obedience to the spirit is possible only through disobedience to the letter. Always the letter must yield to the spirit, and justice to generosity. They who contend for exact obedience to the letter are termed formalists, and they who are unwilling to pay for generosity to one person by injustice to another are looked upon as hard-hearted.

These reflections are occasioned by a review of the many sharp conflicts and wide divergences of opinion and mutual recriminations that arose and held sway in diocesan Conventions through twenty years and more concerning the proper disposition of the Hamner Hall property in Montgomery. Through this period the property in question was developing legally and justly from an institution for the education of the young Churchmen of Alabama into the bulk of the Episcopal Endowment Fund, and through the same period uninformed amiability and illogical sentiment were enacting anew, and with the old-time result, the role of Dame Partington. The physical laws that govern tides and storms are not more clearly the laws of God than are those moral laws by which this metamorphosis was guided.

We have already seen that Hamner Hall was opened
