taunts of this little town were just as happy as it was possible for them to be, making good things, no temptations of any character to allure them away from their happy, ~~no~~ homes and fire-sides other than neighborly visits. No theaters, no saloons, no road-side bars, to worry parents about their children's being led astray or downfall. But this joy, this happiness was not to last. For in early fall, ^{in 1877} a terrible scourge and ~~an epidemic~~ broke out in New Orleans, ^{and now found to be an epidemic} having been brought there by ^{an} incoming ship from some South American ~~city~~ ^{city}. The yellow fever, one of the most contagious and fatal diseases known at that time, and doctors ~~at that time~~ did not know how to battle and stop the spread. So fatal was the disease ~~that~~ ^{that} ~~some~~ 75 or 80% of those ^{with} stricken, the disease, proved fatal. People died so fast that ~~they~~ it was impossible to receive a respectable burial, and much trouble was had to bury the ^{dead} body after body ^{was} carried to cemetery ^{places on the ground, many cases} in boxes, when coffins ^{with} could be secured, and just as fast as graves could be dug, the corpses would be put into ^{the grave} and covered without ceremony. ^{These diggings} ~~the grave~~ ^{the grave} diggers had to work night and day - with out rest.

The spread of the demand soon reached this little ship town of some seven or eight hundred people. People throughout the entire Southland also the North began to take notice with uneasiness of the spread of this terrible disease. and many towns, villages and cities began to quarantine against the grief stricken New Orleans. Before steps were taken generally for a ~~quarantine~~. ~~the yellow fever soon struck this little~~ quarantine against all infected towns. The father of the little family mentioned above, became very much disturbed ^{and concerned} about his own family, which now numbered ^{seven} ~~four~~ ^{with father and} children. Three boys and two ^{girls}. The oldest, son, being thirteen -and the baby sister, only eleven months of age, approaching his wife, he told her ^{on day at home, the father} to get the children ready and pack things - as he wanted them to go back to the old home away from this terrible scourge, before quarantine was placed against this little town. The dear sweet mother starting to get ^{ready} asked the father how soon could he be ready. he replied he was not going to leave, if every body left. The train would have to stop running and his position in the ^{keeping business in running stage} ~~ship~~ depended upon him to keep the train running, if the train stopped nothing could be brought into ~~the~~ the impated little city, for the people whom he called friends, no medicines, no air, nothing to eat, and he could not think of being the cause of their further suffering. The mother then said, Jack, if you will leave with me and the children, then your friends ^{are} and my friends, and I will be just as loyal ^{as} you, so long I stay; For weeks later, this dear mother and father, <sup>because afflicted with the disease and for some pastime of it, they had to meet</sup> ~~and~~ gone to meet their heavenly father. ~~They~~ They made the sacrifice, and those five children were left orphans, with us one to care for them, until an aged cousin had them brought home to her in the old home after the quarantine was lifted. This, my dear friends, is a true story, and leads to our text

~~So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many. ^{xx} He hath appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself. - <sup>John 1: 29 & 26th verse of the 9th chapter, according to the spirit of St Paul to the Hebrews</sup>~~ up his cross and follow me Matthew 16: 24 what he thought life was for.

What was the result?

I have lived long enough to see. That man became and is to-day merely a kind of human animal. His face has lost every spiritual line. No character, no high thought, nothing but the mark of the beast is written on his countenance. And though he possesses a name which once was honored--not for anything he had done, but because of the deeds of his ancestors--yet I would rather a thousand times be the humblest, poorest orphan boy upon this earth, yet with some spark of high aspiration and noble vision, than to be the miserable thing, the clod, that man is to-day.

But, of course, all men are not ^{so}sordid: there are ^{the}visions than this of sensual enjoyment which are somewhat higher, though far from the highest. There are men whose fondest hope seems to be to minister to their own vanity, men whose vision is perhaps a splendid mansion, costly apparel, half dozen motor cars, and magnificent entertainments. Have you not heard of such men, who amaze a city with a ball that costs ^{an}fortune; while others, men of sense, regard it all as a piece of monumental vulgarity and folly? I have seen such, I have heard them speak, I have seen their places of abode--not homes, but great granite piles more like some public institution, where every piece of furniture, every gilding, floor, and picture shrieked at you, "See how much I cost." Vanity, triviality unspeakable, and monumental vulgarity.

But do you know that men barter their souls for things just like these, and the world often calls it success when they attain them? That is what the boastfully practical man of the world calls success. That is what he seems to think life is for, its highest achievement, its noblest fruition.

And, standing like a rock, a very Rock of Ages, against any such unworthy ideal of human life, is the religion of the Nazarene. It and assumed charge, possibly the latter part of October, 1860, as the minutes of that month speak of a purchasing or rental committee, composed of Samuel Cruse, S. D. Cabaniss and George P. Beirne, being unable to secure a desirable place for a rectory, and that something had to be done at once, as the new minister was due here in the next day or two. They reported that the ^{McClung} ~~McClung~~ residence on Adams Avenue could be purchased, and so recommended. This was concurred in.

The next set of minutes were of date January 15, 1861, and speak of Dr. Banister having entered upon the duties of his rectorship. These minutes also speak of the Vestry and congregation assembling at the church, ~~congregating~~, out of respect and love for Bishop N. H. Cobbs, the first Bishop of this Diocese, who had died in Montgomery on January 11, 1861. This service was quite a solemn occasion and of some length.

The minutes of March 15, 1861, record the death of Col. John Read, a member of the Vestry for some several years. He was a highly esteemed member and a faithful worker on the Vestry. He was succeeded by Mr. Charles S. McCalley.

In May, 1863, the Rt. Rev. R. E. Wilmer, D. D., who had succeeded Bishop N. H. Cobbs, deceased, made his first visit to Huntsville, and this parish. Upon that occasion Dr. Banister presented for
