W. F. Mills, in his sketch furnished for the Huntsville Directory, City Guide and Business Mirror 1859-1860, wrote that Huntsville citizens were very proud of the newly erected Episcopal church because of its beauty of architecture and unsurpassed interior arrangements.

The Episcopal church is a splendid specimen of Gothic architecture. The building consists of nave, with aisles, chancel, vestry and organ chamber. The length inside is 104 feet, width of nave and aisle 50 feet, height (sic) of tower and spire 151 feet. The chancel is lighted by three lancet windows of beautifully stained glass, with figures descriptive of Biblical incident. The aisles and nave are lighted by windows of tracery of varied description. There is a tower on the north-west corner, it is in two stages, flanked with buttresses while, the spire is octagonal and broached. The interior roof is open, with timbers exposed and paneled (sic). The entrance is through the west end of nave and tower. It is calculated that the church will accommodate 600 persons. The late Frank Wills, Esq., of New York, is the designer of the edifice and Mr. Hugh Moore of Huntsville, the builder.

A brief history of the church written seventy-three years later, in 1933, by the Reverend Cary Gamble adds additional information about the Wills and Dudley connection. Mr. Gamble stated that Frank Wills died before the church was completed and that Henry Dudley became the consulting architect as the construction of the church progressed.<sup>15</sup>

Shortly after the church was completed, much of the original plastering fell and had to be replaced because of dry rot. Other repairs were made to the exterior of the building at a total cost of $2625.00. This money was in addition to the original construction cost, which was detailed in Sam Cruse's account of the financing and construction of the new edifice filed in the Minute Book of the vestry on March 12, 1861.

According to this account, sixty-four members and friends of the congregation raised $29,291.93 through subscriptions ranging from $4,000 to $10 per contribution. Added to this amount was a special collection of $2,901.05 given to the rector to buy a font, stained glass windows, gas fixtures and carpeting. Other sources of revenue totaling $3,607.41 were gained from the sale of the church rectory ($2,508.25), two organ concerts
