Introduction

In less than 20 short years, Virginia and the nation will celebrate the 400th anniversary of the establishment of the first permanent European settlement in America at Jamestown. This international celebration in 2007 will focus attention on the importance of history in the life of the Commonwealth. With the unique heritage we possess as Virginians, that occasion will be used to evaluate our efforts to preserve the physical reminders of our past for future generations to understand and appreciate.

Virginia's historic resources are among the most treasured assets of the Commonwealth and, in the final analysis, are what help to distinguish us from the rest of the nation. They are essential in defining our identity as a people and underlie the present and future economic health of the Commonwealth. Places such as Mount Vernon, Monticello, and Colonial Williamsburg attract millions of visitors each year and are counted among the most important historic resources in the world.

However, there are many other places of equal importance in defining the heritage of our Commonwealth: the commercial districts in Virginia's towns and cities, with their elaborate storefronts and rich Victorian detailing; the rural villages and farms overlooking pristine fields, valleys, and mountains; the archaeological sites that hold information about the earliest inhabitants on the continent and the world the Jamestown colonists encountered in 1607; and the nineteenth and early twentieth century industrial centers that through simple yet functional buildings speak of the first efforts at rebuilding the South after the devastation of war. All combine to create an atmosphere, a context, and a setting for today's inhabitants that is uniquely Virginian.

In addition to their cultural significance, these resources offer enormous economic potential. The economic growth that comes with the rehabilitation and revitalization of our downtowns, and the attraction of the Commonwealth for tourists is just beginning to be explored. But as Virginia's historic resources become increasingly important to the economic as well as the cultural well-being of the Commonwealth, the threats to their existence are multiplying.

We can no longer assume that these resources will remain forever. The preservation of Mount Vernon more than 125 years ago was a response to plans to sell the home of the first president for commercial use. Today we still face the prospect that plans that do not consider the importance of our past may destroy our heritage as Virginians. Change must come, but it must be channeled so that we utilize rather than destroy our most important assets. And our heritage is more than individual buildings in isolated surroundings. Protection of single sites will prove fruitless if the surrounding landscapes that help give these sites their character are destroyed.

The General Assembly recognized the importance of preservation 20 years ago when it established the Virginia Historic Landmarks Commission. But in those 20 years there has been tremendous growth in the Commonwealth without an accompanying growth in Virginia's ability to protect its heritage and manage change. Virginia was once a national leader in the preservation movement, but other states have now surpassed our effort. This Commission was established, in the words of Fincastle, Botetourt County, is one of a diminishing number of rural towns where the surrounding landscape has not been eroded by sprawling development. Part of this view has now been permanently protected by the gift of an easement to the Virginia Historic Landmarks Board.

Even in communities that have adopted some architectural guidelines for historic areas, traditional zoning categories still often call for uses more intense than the historic structures or areas can accommodate. Some communities have the very special honor and obligations inherent in being the sites of those Civil War battlefields so famous for the bloodshed and heroism of our forefathers that helped shape the entire nation. The essence of those battlefields is the quiet open space and visual integrity that allow us today both to reflect upon and to honor the combatants. However, all our battlefields from Northern Virginia to Fredericksburg to Richmond to Petersburg now face the tremendous pressures of the urban growth that begins in Massachusetts and ends in Virginia. The battlefields of the Valley Campaign are now witnessing the march of new houses where soldiers once trod. That essential openness and quiet repose is fast disappearing.

Battlefields are not the only places where open space is critical to defining the historic resource. For example, the rural village of Waterford in Loudoun county is facing the loss of its National Historic Landmark status because currently proposed development will significantly alter the character of its landscape, even though it will not destroy any existing structures.

- A lack of information, coordination, and planning results in threats to some of Virginia's most important historic resources: those owned by the Commonwealth itself.

Maintenance and demolition decisions on many state-owned landmarks are made by agencies and individuals who may know little of the historic significance of the sites and have little or no training in preservation and restoration techniques. While the Commonwealth owns and maintains historic resources of national and international importance, most of these structures are not included in any special rehabilitation and restoration program that considers the historic nature of these resources.

- Archaeological sites that are among the most important in the country are routinely lost due to a variety of factors, including a lack of time and money for excavation, poorly planned development, and erosion.

Richmond National Battlefield Park, Henrico. Virginia's role in the Civil War is embodied in the battlefields across the state. While parts of most are owned by the National Park Service, the Park Service has been unable to purchase all of the land necessary to protect these silent memorials to a devastating period in the nation's history. Earthworks, such as these shown in the photograph, are frequently threatened.

Southwestern State Hospital's Rotunda in Smyth County is all that remains of a large 19th century complex for the treatment of the mentally ill. Changing standards of care and the inability to find another use led to the recent demolition of most of the historic buildings to make way for new facilities.

Total Fiscal Impacts of the Recommendations for Improvement in the Commonwealth's Preservation Program

This chapter has outlined a series of specific programmatic recommendations, some of which can only be achieved with additional staff positions and increased funding for the state preservation agency. The fiscal impacts of those recommendations are:

Annual Operating Costs
Item	Current (FY89)	Proposed
A. Staff for the central office in the areas of survey, register, administration, heritage education, and support	$ 758,000	$1,208,000
B. Regional preservation centers	139,000	1,189,000
C. Archaeological curation facility and program	0	350,000
D. Salvage archaeology program	150,000	200,000
E. Underwater archaeology program	0	100,000
F. State-owned property survey	75,000	(see below)
	$1,122,000	$3,047,000

With these recommendations in place, the total increase in the annual operating costs for the state preservation agency would be $1,925,000.

One-Time Expenditures
A. Completion of the Yorktown Shipwreck Project	$ 254,000
B. Completion of the major phase of survey of state-owned historic structures in 1990-92 biennium	$ 75,000
C. Computerization of Survey	$ 300,000
Total One-Time Expenditures	$ 629,000

Ghent Historic District, Norfolk, built at the turn of the century, is one of the most prestigious residential areas in the city.

The Sidna Allen House, Carroll County, was intended by its owner to be the finest house in the county when it was built in 1911.

White's Mill, in Washington County, built in the 18th century and incorporating changes made throughout the 19th, is a working example of the history of gristmilling in this country.

Seatack Lifesaving Station, Virginia Beach, was constructed by the predecessor of the U.S. Coast Guard in 1903 to rescue shipwreck victims. It is now a favorite landmark in the middle of the commercial development in Virginia Beach.

Financial Support and Incentives for Preservation

1. Support the basic operations of VDHL as noted in the first set of recommendations above (estimated annual cost of $450,000 included under first set of recommendations).
2. Continue to provide assistance to significant historic properties through the General Assembly's grant support as well as the new state grants program for preservation. (Estimated annual cost of $1,500,000)
3. Establish a statewide revolving fund for preservation. (Estimated initial cost of $2,000,000 — estimated annual cost of $100,000)
4. Require that all grant recipients of state funds in excess of $25,000 for preservation donate a permanent preservation easement to the Commonwealth.
5. Expand Virginia's Main Street program by providing technical business assistance and continue assistance to cities after three Newtown, King and Queen County, is a typical 19th century Tidewater crossroads town.

6. Provide for a property tax deduction for the gift of an easement to the Commonwealth. (Estimated annual cost of $150,000)
7. Study innovative financial programs for use in the Commonwealth.

farmers, appointed by the Governor from a list of two qualified nominees for each vacancy submitted by the Board of Directors of the Virginia Association of Soil and Water Conservation Districts and the Soil and Water Conservation Board in joint session, each for a term of four years. Appointed members shall not serve more than two consecutive full terms. Appointments to fill vacancies shall be made in the same manner as described above, except that such appointments shall be for the unexpired terms only. The Board may invite the Virginia State Conservationist, Soil Conservation Service, to serve as an advisory nonvoting member. The Board shall keep a record of its official actions, shall adopt a seal and may perform acts, hold public hearings, and promulgate regulations necessary for the execution of its functions under this chapter.

§ 10.1-707. Board continued; duties; meetings; allocation of funds.—A. The Board on Conservation and Development of Public Beaches is continued and shall be composed of eight members as follows: the Directors of the Virginia Marine Resources Commission, and the Department of Conservation and Historic Resources Recreation or their designees and six members-at-large appointed by the Governor for four-year terms. Members-at-large who have served two successive full terms shall be ineligible for reappointment until four years have elapsed since their last appointment. All terms shall begin July 1, and appointments to fill vacancies occurring shall be for the unexpired term. A chairman shall be selected from among the members-at-large.

B. The Board shall (i) review the financial needs of localities for implementation of this article; (ii) determine successful applicants; (iii) determine the equitable allocation of funds among participating localities except for allocations provided for in the current general appropriations act; and (iv) oversee local implementation of approved projects.

C. The Board shall meet once prior to the beginning of each fiscal year to receive applications for grants from localities and to determine the allocation of such grants, and as often throughout the year as necessary.

D. The Department shall provide the Board with staff assistance and shall maintain necessary financial records.

§ 10.1-1001. Cave Board; qualifications; officers.—A. The Cave Board is continued within the Department of Conservation and Historic Resources Recreation and shall consist of the Director of the Department of Historic Resources, or his designee, serving in an ex officio capacity and eleven citizens of Virginia appointed by the Governor for four-year terms. Appointments shall be made on the basis of activity and knowledge in the conservation, exploration, study and management of caves.

B. The Cave Board shall meet at least three times a year. Six members shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. The Board shall annually elect a chairman, vice-chairman and recording secretary and such other officers as the Board deems necessary.

§ 10.1-1003. Permits for excavation and scientific investigation; how obtained; penalties.—A. In addition to the written permission of the owner required by § 10.1-1004 a permit shall be obtained from the Department of Conservation and Historic Resources Recreation prior to excavating or removing any archaeological, paleontological, prehistoric, or historic feature of any cave. The Department shall issue a permit to excavate or remove such a feature if it finds with the concurrence of the Director of the Department of Historic Resources that it is in the best interest of the Commonwealth and that the applicant meets the criteria of this section. The permit shall be issued for a period of two years and may be renewed upon expiration. Such permit shall not be transferable; however, the provisions of this section shall not preclude any person from working under the direct supervision of the permittee.

B. All field investigations, explorations, or recovery operations undertaken under this section shall be carried out under the general supervision of the Department and in a manner to ensure that the maximum amount of historic, scientific, archaeological, and educational information may be recovered and preserved in addition to the physical recovery of objects.

C. A person applying for a permit pursuant to this section shall:

1. Be a historic, scientific, or educational institution, or a professional or amateur historian, biologist, archaeologist or paleontologist, who is qualified and recognized in these areas of field investigations.
2. Provide a detailed statement to the Department giving the reasons and objectives for excavation or removal and the benefits expected to be obtained from the contemplated work.
3. Provide data and results of any completed excavation, study, or collection at the first of each calendar year.
