Fla. Indians treaty
w. Jackson, etc. (#14)
402

36 w.
Put here

In essence, what Pope was requesting the Federal government to do was to underwrite the financial standing of the Planter's and Merchant's Bank in two ways. First, the Treasury was asked to continue to allow the bank's notes to be accepted as payment for land purchases at the Monticello land office, and to continue the bank as a depository for land office funds. Such government backing would tend to ~~give~~ give stability to the value of Planter's and Merchant's currency in circulation, thus, allowing it to be exchanged freely for cotton or Eastern notes, which would readily be converted into specie. By making such exchanges, Pope concluded, the Federal deposits in his bank could ~~also~~ be transferred to the Treasury of the United States.
