JACKSON COUNTY

Jackson County was created December 13, 1819, by an Act of the 1 State Legislature while in session at Huntsville, Alabama, and was named in honor of Andrew Jackson, a military hero of the Creek War. It&s initial boundaries included all the territory north of the Tennessee River and east of Madison County which had been ceded to the United States Government by the Cherokee Nation of Indians on February 27, 1819.

The original boundaries of Jackson County, as given in the statutes are as follows: "All that tract of country lately obtained from the Cherokee Nation of Indians, lying on the north side of the Tennessee River, South of the Tennessee State line, and east of the present Madison County line, and of the Plint River, after it has left Madison County."

Since 1819, the boundaries of Jackson County have been changed six times. Old Decatur County was created by an Act of the Legislature, December 13, 1821, out of Jackson County and the part of Madison County east of the Flint River. All the northern part of the present county of Marshall was included in Decatur County. Woodville, now in Jackson County, was the county seat.

Decatur County was abolished by an Act of the Legislature in 1824. All the present county of Marshall north of the Tennessee River was given back to Jackson County and all the western part of Decatur County east of Flint River and west of Jackson County was added to Madison County. This territory is often called "New Medison."

Forder 3 Forder 3 Serier 7, Box 1 The first county seat was at Sauta on the Arthur Burns Indian Reservation, four miles south of Larkinsville, near the old Birdsong Spring or House of Happiness. It was here at the Burns Reservation that Sequoyah announced his alphabet in 1822. Sauta was also noted for the Saltpetre Cave which was mined extensively during the Civil War, producing as much as 700 pounds a day of the purest strains to be found anywhere in the state. The works of the mine were destroyed by Gen. 0. M. Mitchell in 1862 and the cave has not been worked industrially since.

Bellefonte was the first town incorporated in Jackson County 12 // by an Act of the Legislature on December 15, 1821, and was selected by the County Commissioners, in 1824, as the second county seat of Justice. This county seat, situated on the Harlan, Morgan and Riley Indian Reservations became one of the most important shipping with Teacture K. Large droves of fine cattle, as well as many points in North Alabama. Large droves of fine cattle, as well as many but cotton, were brought to Bellefonte to be loaded on boats and carried down the Tennessee River to market.

A number of prominent doctors and lawyers settled here and practiced their professions for many years. One of the most noted Bellefonte residents was Williamson R. W. Cobb. Cobb served in the United States Congress prior to the Civil War, being one of the only two Jackson County men ever to represent the county in Congress

Bellefonte remained a thriving river port for many years; but with the coming of the Memphis and Charleston Failroad in 1857, it soon began to decline. Since many of the citizens opposed the building of the tracks through the town, to was routed by the place that is known today as Hollywood, and as a result, the town of Hollywood began to flourish as did other towns along the reilroad, including Stevenson and Bridgeport.

County Commissioners to locate / county seat. The Act passed and the Commissioners voted to locate the new seat of Justice at Scottsboro. The records were moved from Bellefonte, November 13, 1868.

The population of the other towns in the county began to decline and Scottaboro began to build. Today the county, as a whole, enjoys one of the largest industrial complexes for a town of it's size, in North Alabama. As a result of the industrial growth over the past 40 years the population of Scottaboro has grown from 2,304
