upon requests copies have been sent to various other schools and organizations.⁴

During the final three months of the project, a concentrated effort was made by the coordinating office to make the source material collected more readily available for research and instructional purposes and to publicize its existence and nature. The office staff accordingly made copies of all transcripts that had been proofed and retyped. Copies were also made of brief summaries of all other interviews. The transcripts and summaries were then bound in ten volumes of approximately 200 pages each, and a set was sent to the archives of each participating institution and to the ACHE office. Classroom instructors and student and faculty researchers at all of the institutions will thereby have immediate access to all of the completed transcripts and also to an indication of the nature and location of the untranscribed tapes. The transcripts and summaries were also microfilmed so as to permit possible wider distribution in the future; and the originals of the transcripts are being placed in the archives of the institution from which they were recorded, where they also will be available to researchers and instructors. Finally, a list of the descriptive titles of all interviews conducted by the project is included in this report. The wide distribution given to this list will
